Diving and Swimming Exhibitions, Including a Bathing Girls' Revue, Will Be Staged.

PARADE TO PRESENT "OLD-TIME" MACHINES

Cheyenne Kiser's Cow-boys to Give Thrilling Program—Atlanta Is Crowded With Shoppers.

Program for Today

The Thursday program of Progress and Prosperity week celebration is as follows:

9 A. M.—Parade of "old time" automobiles, together with the latest models of machines of the same make.

2:30 P. M. at Lakewood Park—Cheyenne Kiser's cowboys and cowgirls from the Diamond E ranch, Phoenix, Ariz., in thrilling rodeo program.

7 P. M.—Concert by Wedemeyer's band.

7:30 P. M.—Diving and swimming exhibition, including a bathing girls' review.

8 P. M.—Immense dancing festival under auspices of Civitan club and Venetian water carnival under auspices of Lion's club. To be given regardless of weather conditions.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Under the bleak December weather which has lingered too long in the lap of spring, committees in charge of the Progress and Prosperity week celebration Wednesday went ahead with renewed vigor in their preparation to make the shows and spectacles at Lakewood bigger and better than ever during the rest of the week. The recent heavy rains and the drizzling and murky conditions Wednesday caused the committee to call off the program both in the afternoon and night and to utilize the time thus afforded in completing preparations for the presentation of the feature attractions billed for Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Rain spoiled the plans of the committee in charge of the Ford car parade which was scheduled for 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, and this event has been postponed until Friday morning at 9 o'clock. Everything is ready, however, for the "oldtimers' parade," which will be staged at 9 o'clock Thursday morning.

Oldtimers' Parade.

The oldtimers' parade will be a unique procession. The city has been canvassed by the committee in search of all automobiles of the early days of the industry, and these ancient derelicts of the road will wheeze and puff through Atlanta's streets in company with the latest models of their 1922 counterparts. The parade will show the advancement of the automobile industry and at the same time will recall memories of the early days when the automobile was hailed with wonder and Ford jokes now used in vaudeville were fresh in the smallest towns and hamlets.

B. F. Ulmer and Sam Porter have charge of the oldtimers' parade, and they say, that in addition to showing the strides made in automobile development that considerable humor will be injected into the parade through the appearance of old-style automobiles still able to run which most people thought were long since discarded.

The outstanding features at Lakewood park Thursday will be the first presentation of the Venetian water carnival, the diving and swimming exhibitions and the second exhibition of Cheyenne Kiser's rodeo roundup of western ranch thrillers.

The Water Carnival.

Just as Atlanta was surprised and pleased over the magnitude and splendor of the beautiful "Romance of the Rose" parade Monday night, so will the city be astonished at the brilliant and spellbinding splendor of the spectacular Venetian water carnival featuring "A Night in Venice," in the opinion of those who have watched the preparation.

Including the dancers, nearly half a thousand people will take part in

GIRLS' PLEA TO SEND DAD TO DEATH CHAIR

Indianapolis, May 31.—Seventeen-year-old Mabel Donovan apparently has signed her father's death warrant. The girl's wish, expressed in a letter to Governor McCray, was that the sentence of death on William E. Donovan for the murder of her mother be carried out, will in all probability be granted.

Donovan, who shot and killed his wife as she stood with their two-year-old child in her arms and his daughter looking on, will die in the electric chair at the Indiana state prison in Michigan City early Thursday, according to announcement from the governor's office Wednesday night.

DAUGHTER IS BORN TO FORMER EMPRESS

Madrid, May 31.—(By the Associated Press.)—A daughter was born this morning to former Empress Zita of Austria-Hungary. King Alfonso, as soon as he received the news, went to the palace at Pardo, in the suburbs of Madrid, where the ex-empress has been residing since her return recently from the island of Madeira after the late Emperor Charles died in exile early in April.

DYKES IS ELECTED HIGH SCHOOL HEAD BY FULTON BOARD

Guy A. Moore, Former Principal, Will Be Retained as Professor Until January 1, 1923.

HIGH SCHOOL PROBLEM NOW WORRIES BOARD

May Be Discontinued After This Year as Result of Failure of the Bond Issue to Pass.

W. F. Dykes, former superintendent of the Atlanta public school system, was elected principal of the Fulton County high school at a meeting of the Fulton county board of education Wednesday afternoon in the office of J. W. Simmons, superintendent. Professor Dykes, who was elected for one year, will receive $2,400 a year for his services.

Guy A. Moore, former principal of the school, was retained as a professor until January 1, 1923, when he will assume his duties in the tax receiver's office. Mr. Moore ran on the ticket of W. H. Abbott, who was elected tax receiver in the special election April 18. Mr. Dykes ran on the ticket of John W. Armistead, one of the defeated candidates.

May Discontinue School. In addition to the election of high school teachers, the board went into a general discussion of the advisability of operating the high school another year.

Members of the board pointed out that the bond issue for school improvements had failed and that it would be impossible to run the school longer than this year and declared they were in favor of discontinuing the school now. However, it was finally decided to run the school as far into the next year as the money for operating the school system would allow.

Much apprehension as to the final outcome of the problem of running the Fulton County high school was shown by the board members and Professor Simmons.

Teachers Are Elected. The teachers elected for the high school at the meeting Wednesday are: W. E. Dykes, principal; Guy A. Moore, G. H. Williams, F. L. Henderson, P. P. Jones, Mrs. George Johnson, Isabel Dewey, Lellah Buncie, Sallie Shannon, Carolyn Eakes, Edna Cheyenne, Marion Miller, J. E. White, Belle Cooper, Robert Rosser, E. C. Wimberly and J. A. Wells.

Grammar school teachers were elected at a meeting held last week.

Store Is Cleared To Escape Wrath Of Jealous Wife

Pistol in Hand, Mrs. Kate Smith Raids Soft Drink Stand.

"And then the fun began" when Mrs. Kate Smith, 24 and pretty, of 91 Plum street, found her husband sitting between two young women in a soft drink stand at Corbett and Marietta streets Tuesday afternoon, so Recorder George E. Johnson was told Wednesday at the trial of the husband, wife and Mrs. Ollie Hendrix, 23, of 243 Courtland street.

According to the evidence before Judge Johnson, a little girl ran to Smith's home and told the wife that her husband was in the drink stand flirting with two young women. The enraged wife went to the gasoline filling station nearby, where her husband was employed, seized a pistol and rushed into the store. A second later she was the only occupant of the place except one of the defendants, Mrs. Hendrix, who could not get out of the back nor the front. One shot was fired by Mrs. Smith during the excitement, which seemed to have missed everybody, and buried itself in the wall.

Mrs. Hendrix, who was accused in the courtroom by Mrs. Smith of flirting with her husband, stated that the girl Smith bought the drink for had escaped. This seems to have been substantiated by Call Officer J. E. McDaniel, who, with Officer John Crankshaw, investigated the disturbance.

M. S. Smith, the husband, was fined $8 by Judge Johnson, and so was the wife. The case against Mrs. Hendrix was dismissed. Mrs. Smith told Mrs. Smith that his duty was to bind her over to the state court for having a pistol. However, upon her promise and the promise of her husband not to become involved in any further such scenes, he allowed them to settle the matter in his court.

Germany Is Permitted To Postpone Payments During Present Year

Reparations Commission Approves German Reply to Its Ultimatum, French Delegates Joining in the Decision.

HOOPER ARRANGES EMERGENCY COAL PRICES IN STRIKE

Scales Based on "Moral Agreement" Between Secretary of Commerce and Mine Operators.

ANNOUNCES PRICES AFTER CONFERENCES

Says Someone Must Take Responsibility, and Selects Himself for Leadership.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. Paris, May 31.—The reparations commission tonight fully approved the German reply to its ultimatum and definitely decided to grant Germany a provisional moratorium for the year 1922.

The text of the commission's letter to Chancellor Wirth and also its decision were issued about midnight, after the commission had framed them at a session lasting many hours.

The decision was unanimous, the French delegate joining in it, despite the report of opposition from a section of the chamber which caused deep concern in commission circles during the day.

German Action Passed. The action taken by the German government to put its finances on a sound basis and eliminate as much as possible the wholesale printing of paper money constitutes a serious effort to meet the commission's requirements, the decision says. Germany did not begin at an earlier date steps in this direction.

In its letter to Chancellor Wirth the commission states that in view of an important decision on the question of postponement of payments the commission felt justified in taking prompt action notwithstanding the fact that on several points Germany's answer requires further consideration.

The commission informs the German chancellor that these matters will be dealt with in another communication in the near future, but it is indicated that these matters are of minor importance and will have no effect on the present decision, making the decision to grant partial postponement of payments in 1922 beginning June 1, the commission says.

May Be Cancelled. "The commission recalled that the postponement now confirmed remains liable to be cancelled at any time in accordance with its previous decision if the commission is subsequently satisfied that Germany has failed to carry out the conditions laid down."

The commission further reserves its right to cancel postponement if at any time it becomes dissatisfied with the progress made in the settlement of matters still outstanding, or failing to carry through the arrangements in regard to the floating debt specified in the chancellor's letter of May 28, or because of inability to obtain the assistance of a foreign loan, Germany does not make alternative arrangements satisfactory to the commission for dealing with the budget deficit and the floating debt.

The decision of the commission will be communicated to the members of the international bankers' committee tomorrow morning and the committee is expected to begin actual work of organizing a loan at its session in the afternoon, provided none of the members is out of agreement with the commission's decision.

In reparations circles it is said that the bankers will approve fully the commission's action, and the view is expressed that a loan of more than $1,000,000,000 will be arranged within the next few weeks.

GEORGE PUTS BLAME ON UNITED STATES

London, May 31.—(By the Associated Press.)—With Germany defiant, Premier Lloyd George had planned to make a brief statement on reparations in the house of commons this afternoon, but when John Robert Clynes, labor member, opened the debate and attributed the present situation to the United States.

Ralph Rivers Comes to His Death From Gunshot Wound.

Ralph C. Rivers, 19 years old, of 202 Jones avenue, came to his death from gun-shot wound self-inflicted, according to the verdict of the coroner's jury at the inquest held at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon over the body in the chapel of A. C. Hemperly, at East Point.

Constitution Party Convinced of Need Of Improved Roads

Churchill Intimates in Speech That Resumption of English Rule May Be Outgrowth of Trouble.

BRITAIN MAY SEND TROOPS INTO ERIN

BY RALPH H. TURNER. United News Staff Correspondent. London, May 31.—In a speech marked by warning to both free staters and republicans of the dangerous consequences of the present situation in Ireland—the outstanding point of which was a threat that Britain would occupy the country unless the E. Valerian sign, the clauses of the Irish treaty supporting the free state—Winston Churchill has issued the first public intimation that resumption of British rule may be the outgrowth of the recent strengthening of the republican position.

The colonial minister, speaking in commons after several days of conferring with free state leaders here, further emphasized the seriousness with which the British view the situation when in response to a question from Sir Henry Wilson, regarding the British troops at Dublin, he replied that the troops will be held awaiting eventualities.

"In event of the setting up of a republic, it would be the government's intention to hold Dublin as one of the essential centers. In the steps which might follow," Churchill asserted.

Deplores Irish Pact. With Michael Collins and Arthur Griffith, the two free state leaders, listening from the gallery, Churchill strongly deplored the Collins-De Valera pact which gives the De Valera fifteen seats in parliament against sixty-four supporters of the Irish treaty and four ministers in the coalition Irish cabinet against five of the free state faction.

He declared it was an agreement with a group of treaty opponents who, on the day before the coalition agreement was signed, had declared represented only two per cent of the Irish people.

"The consequences of this agreement are very serious," Churchill continued, "because it makes it probable that the Irish people won't be able to give free expression to their views and it is almost certain they won't be able to say in any intelligent way whether they accept or reject the treaty offered by Great Britain."

Further co-operation between the north and south is also made very difficult by the compact, Churchill said. Referring to the occupation by the republicans of two townships in Ulster, he declared that "we stand today in the presence of a very grave incident."

Would Be Divided. Continuing his criticism of the agreement, Churchill insisted that the Irish parliament which would be elected as a result of the Collins-De Valera agreement would be arbitrarily divided without reference to the national sentiment on the question of whether an independent republic should be established or the free state treaty accepted.

"It may be argued that these matters primarily concern Irishmen," the colonial minister said, "but as far as they affect the faithful carrying out of the treaty, they concern us and we are not in the least disposed to relax our responsibility and vigilance in regard to them."

He cited the free state's reasons for signing the pact with De Valera—degeneration of conditions preventing a free election, and belief that there would be sporadic fighting, burning of ballot boxes, and that intimidation of the voters by the candidates would accompany the election.

"If that is true, it is a terrible reflection on the Irish people and upon their capacity to use those democratic institutions for which they have so long and so loyally proclaimed their desire," Churchill observed.

Could Not Secure Life. Although the provisional government.

FOREST FIRE RAGES AT GATES OF PORTLAND

Portland, Ore., May 31.—A raging forest fire roared at the very gates of Portland Wednesday night. Over an area of twenty square miles east of the city, through timber dry from many days of maximum heat and fuelly fought by hundreds of men attempting to save homes scattered in their path, the flames were making their way through a canyon toward the Sandy river and Portland's waterworks.

Portland was cloaked in smoke, and embers fell on the suburbs to the east of the city. The glare from the flames reddened the sky to the east. No loss of life was reported.

The village of Cedar Falls, seven miles south of North Bend, is reported to be almost entirely isolated by the fire. Rescue parties are hastening from North Bend to aid the marooned people in the doomed town.

Eleven Hours Required for Expedition to Travel 30 Miles From High-lands to Clayton.

BY H. H. WIMPEE. Constitution Staff Correspondent. Clayton, Ga., May 31.—(Special.) If government dignitaries who are members of The Constitution's north Georgia and North Carolina forestry tour requires any proof that there is a crying need for good roads in this section, one of the most beautiful in the entire nation, they were more than persuaded today that there is no room for argument on this particular score.

The party tonight at 7:15 o'clock (eastern time) reached Clayton after covering exactly thirty miles over the most miserable roads ever encountered by an automobile expedition, the trip extending more than eleven hours of the most grueling experience imaginable.

Leaving Highlands, N. C., where the party spent Tuesday night, shortly after 8 o'clock this morning in a downpour of rain, the expedition toiled and struggled through seas of mud, slipped and skidded down precipitous mountain sides and tugged and strained at wheels locked firmly in a bed of clinging red Georgia mud alternately until a few minutes after 7 o'clock Wednesday night, tired and exhausted, the caravan drew up at the business district of Clayton.

Recognize Great Need.

A fervent prayer of thanksgiving for safety of life and limb was breathed by each member of the party, and when the subject of good roads in Georgia's resort section was broached, federal highway speakers waxed unusually eloquent on the need of real highways in this locality.

The Georgia Tech radio outfit was lost in the mountains somewhere between Clayton and Highlands, for a time but arrived in Clayton, not very long after the rest of the party had reached that place.

Despite the steady and disheartening downpours of rain which have greeted the tour on all sides, the welcome from citizens of this section of the state and of North Carolina has remained as warm as on the day when the Constitution's expedition started out from Atlanta to be greeted by delegations from every town along the route.

The only disappointing feature so far is the fact that the trip to Franklin, N. C., which was slated for Wednesday morning, had to be called off on account of impossible roads. A hot dinner and a warm welcome from the entire town was awaiting the party, but its leaders learned of the condition of the roadways and thought it advisable that the trip be cancelled, which was done with much regret.

Spent Night in Clayton. Members of the party will spend the night in Clayton, where they will be the guests of the townspeople at a dinner at the hotel soon after its arrival. Welcome was extended by authorities of the city, and speakers of the party told of the wonderful possibilities of this section as a playground and recreational center, a section strongly deserving good roads and a splendid region for forestry preservation.

Congressmen Bell and Lee stressed the idea of developing the great lumber store of the state in addition to opening up the wonderful beauties of Georgia's mountain section.

T. H. McDonald, chief of the federal forest service, will be here.

JURY IS SELECTED FOR VINSON TRIAL

Despite Finding at Lunacy Hearing, Insanity Will Probably Be Plea of Defense.

Following the drawing of the jury, which consumed the entire day and exhausted seven panels of veniremen Wednesday, the trial of Mrs. Cora Lou Vinson, who is charged with the murder of her husband, Dr. W. D. Vinson, will get under way Thursday morning in Fulton superior court before Judge John D. Humphries.

After the jury had been selected and sworn, Judge Humphries ordered a recess until Thursday at 9 o'clock. The jurors selected are W. E. Leigh, J. H. Haralson, Waddell Coleman, V. J. Hendrix, Roy E. Hoffman, E. P. Paris, E. L. Bradley, H. C. Graham, B. F. Pritchett, W. B. Robertson, J. J. Krollin and E. B. Fisher.

Many prospective jurors were disqualified because of objection to capital punishment or cause, asserting that they had already formed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant.

Mrs. Vinson, who has been confined at the Tower since the shooting of her husband March 30 in a drug store on Marietta street, came into court with her daughter, Mrs. Pauline Brown.

She is represented by Attorney Sam D. Hewlett, Judge New Morris of Marietta, and Attorney J. O. Ewing. The state is represented by Solicitor General John A. Boykin, Assistant Solicitor General E. A. Stephens, and the law firm of Branch & Howard.

A general plea of insanity was predicted as the basis of the defense despite the ruling against Mrs. Vinson in the special plea of insanity several weeks ago. At that time Mrs. Vinson was judged sane at the time of the shooting and was held for murder as in the original indictment.

FORSYTH STREET LOT

SOLD FOR $200,000

William Canlier has purchased from the Atlanta Ice and Bottling company the northeastern corner of Forsyth and Poplar streets, a lot 50 by 80 feet, for a consideration of $200,000, according to announcement Wednesday by the Benjamin D. Watkins Realty company.

The corner has been leased to the Watkins company for a period of it was stated. It is planned to improve the site with a two-story structure, a part of which will be occupied by the Watkins company. The building will be erected by William Canlier for the lessee.

The corner is one of the most centrally located vacant lots in the city. Until a few weeks ago it was occupied by a filling station, which has since been dismantled. The lot fronts 50 feet on Forsyth street, and runs back 80 feet on Poplar street.

About twenty years ago the corner was purchased by the late Albert Steiner for the Atlanta Brewing and Ice company for $25,000, but at that time the development of Forsyth street as a high class business thoroughfare had not begun. Since then the Healey building has been erected immediately across the Poplar street corner, and the Huns & Howell building, an eight-story structure, is being erected on the Forsyth street corner facing the property.

ISSUE IS DISCUSSED
BY T. G. FARMER, JR.

The Truth About the Bond Issue," with details about the proposed amendments to the state constitution, was the subject of an address delivered Wednesday at Washington, Ga., by T. G. Farmer, Jr., managing director of the Georgia Good Roads association.

Mr. Farmer went into every phase of the proposed $75,000,000 bond issue, showed how it will be carried and paid off by gasoline taxes and motor license without an increased tax burden, and invited questions on any detail of the proposed bond issue. He spoke before the Washington Chamber of Commerce, with a large attendance of citizens and Wilkes county farmers.

Mr. Farmer speaks Thursday at Augusta at the invitation of the Augusta Woman's club, which is greatly interested in the highway situation. On Saturday he will address a large meeting at Marietta, at the invitation of the board of trade.

The Good Roads association reports that it is receiving every day additional messages from members of the legislature announcing their intention of supporting the bond issue at the approaching session. Among the latest members to pledge their support are Senator H. C. Hutchens, of Buchanan, and Representative Taylor Smith, of Bremen.

eral bureau of roads, emphasized the need of good highways through this resort section and praised The Constitution for being so progressive as to take the matter of road and forestry development of north Georgia in hand and promoting the present tour, which he predicted will result in untold benefit. W. R. Neel, head of the state highway department, also addressed the gathering on good roads for this section.

Mayor Howard Thompson, of Gainesville, acted as toastmaster, and practically every member of the United States delegation in the tour was called upon for a speech. Welcomed in Highlands.

Hospitality was warmly dispensed Tuesday night in Highlands, where the party was welcomed at the hotel and speeches from the government and state experts were heard. Practically the entire population of the town was present, and the evening was one of the most enjoyable spent by the touring party.

The Constitution's expedition will leave Clayton Thursday morning early and will visit a number of Georgia towns before arriving at the night resting point, Blairsville.

Dillard, Ga., was the only town passed through on Wednesday's short but arduous journey, and here the people turned out en masse and gave the party a rousing welcome.

LEADERS INDORSE FORESTRY TOUR.

Hearty indorsement of The Constitution's north Georgia and Carolina forest tour is expressed in a trio of letters just received from interested citizens in this state and North Carolina. The writers are Senator Pat Haralson, chairman of the Union County Good Roads association, of Blairsville; Joseph Hyde Pratt, director of the North Carolina geological and economic survey, of Chapel Hill, N. C.; and Charles W. McAfee, postmaster of Blair Ridge, Ga.

Senator Haralson's letter is as follows: "As chairman of the Union County Good Roads association, organized since 1916 for encouraging improvement in this county, I am delighted to indorse The Constitution's great work in bringing government highway and forestry officials through this section.

"Union county voted its limit in bonds in 1919. We realize that we have done all we can do financially for good roads, and that the state and federal government aid for highway construction is the only hope of opening up this section for the enjoyment of the people from the outside as well as the development of agricultural and live stock interests of our local people. You will perhaps be surprised to find so much agricultural land in Towns and Union counties, but you need not be surprised at the hospitality of our people in the mountains and the fact that they will welcome The Constitution's party with open arms."

Director Pratt writes as follows: "I have been very much interested in the account of your proposed excursion of government officials through the mountains of Georgia. You have undertaken a piece of constructive work which will redound to the good name and welfare of your state and its people, and I wish you all success in carrying out your plans. I am not without interest that your party plans to visit two points in western North Carolina. I should very much like to be able to meet you at Franklin and welcome you to our state. Unfortunately, I can not arrange to be there next week, so I am writing instead to assure you that the mountain and forestry officials are sending the state of North Carolina will cordially cooperate with the party of Georgia and the federal government in making the southern Appalachians

Forest Section Of Georgia Rich
In Indian Lore

Beautiful Traditions Are Preserved in Book Written by Dr. Knight.

No part of the United States is richer in Indian legendary history than the Blue Ridge mountain sections of north Georgia, which are now being visited by a party of government highway and forestry officials under the auspices of The Constitution. Many of the beautiful traditions of the Cherokee Indians, who once lived in this section, have been preserved in Dr. Lucian Lamar Knight's information book, "Georgia Landmarks, Memorials and Legends."

In Dr. Knight's book many of the scenes of the legends are laid in the very section now being visited by the officials. Included in the list are "The Legend of Hiawasse," "The Cherokee Rose," "The Legend of Jolly Leap," "Yahula," "The Ustutli," "The Search for the Uktena," and "The Enchanted Mountain."

Since many Atlanta people go every summer to the pretty Nacoochee Valley, in White county, the story of how it obtained its name is of particular interest.

How Name Was Given.
Long before Columbus sailed for the then unknown shores of America, the Cherokee Indians lived in north Georgia. In the peaceful valley now called Nacoochee a beautiful Indian maid lived at that time, and her name was "Nacoochee," and the valley obtained its present name from her.

Nacoochee, according to the legend, fell in love with the son of the chief of a hostile tribe. Her lover was named Laccola, and they held clandestine meetings frequently where they vowed to each other eternal love. The father of Nacoochee, chief of his tribe, became terribly angered when he discovered that his daughter was in love with the hostile chief's son. One night the maiden was missed from her tent.

The old chief commanded his warriors to pursue the fugitive," the legend reads. "They found her with Laccola, the son of a hated race. In an instant an arrow was aimed at his breast. Nacoochee sprang before him and received the barbed shaft in her own heart. Her lover was stupefied. He made no resistance and his blood mingled with hers. The lovers were buried in the same grave and a lofty mound was raised to mark the spot. Deep grief seized the old chief and his people, and the valley was ever afterward called Nacoochee Valley. The mound which marks the resting place and the grave of the maiden and her betrothed, surmounted by a solitary pine, are still to be seen, and form one of the most interesting features of the landscape of this lovely vale."

Legend of Hiawasse.

The picturesque little village of Hiawasse lies in the territory where the action of "The Legend of Hiawasse" took place. According to this legend, Hiawasse was a beautiful Indian princess of the Catawba tribe and during a present Carolina and the Cherokees, of north Georgia, Hiawasse was captured by a tribe of the Cherokees. She was seen and loved by a young chief named Nacoochee, means "daring heroism" and he was highly pleased to see that his love was returned.

Nacoochee, accompanied by two attendants, went to the home of the father of Hiawasse and returned the girl to the old Catawba chieftain. He declared his love for Hiawasse, "the beautiful fawn" and asked her hand in marriage. The old Catawba chieftain sternly refused declaring that the great Catawba drank the water of the east while the hated Cherokees drank the water of the west. He told the Indian lad that if he could find a place where these waters met he could marry Hiawasse.

Nacoochee returned and searched day after day for a place where the waters met but believed his quest hopeless. One day he arrived at a valley surrounded by mountains. He saw a small lake which was fed by the waters of the east. After resting a short while he saw three fawns drinking at the lake. He sought to catch one of the fawns and when in the chase he discovered another stream flowing out of the lake to the west. Immediately he set out for the home of the Catawba chieftain to claim his bride. On his way he met Hiawasse who told him that her father would not keep the promise even if Nacoochee had discovered a spot where the waters of the east and west flowed together.

Nacoochee then pointed to one of the high mountains of the Blue Ridge and told Hiawasse to meet him there and she promised to do so. He then went to the Catawba chieftain and as predicted Hiawasse he indignantly refused to countenance the proposed marriage. He stated, however, that inasmuch as Nacoochee had spared the life of his daughter he would allow Nacoochee to go free.

Finds Hiawasse.

Nacoochee sprang into the forest and arriving at the high mountain found Hiawasse awaiting him. They were married and the old Catawba chieftain never saw his daughter again. Nacoochee later became chief of the Cherokee nation and ruled his people wisely.

The Cherokee Rose.

The legend of the "Cherokee Rose" is another pretty story of this beautiful country which was so dear to the Cherokee Indians. "Once upon a time" the legend begins in true story book style, "a proud young chieftain of the Seminoles, of Florida and south Georgia, was captured by his enemies, the Cherokees, and condemned to death in the flames. But he fell seriously ill and it became necessary to wait for his restoration to health before beginning his tortures."

"As he was lying prostrated by disease in a cabin of a Cherokee warrior the dark-eyed daughter of the Cherokee became his nurse. She nursed in grace the bounding fawn, and the young warriors of the tribe said of her that the smile of the Great Spirit was not more beautiful. The young Seminoles instantly became her slaves and she returned his love."

"Stern hatred of the Cherokees had stifled kindly feeling in the hearts of the Cherokees and they grudgingly waited the time when their enemy must die. As the Seminoles' strength gradually returned the Indian maid urged him to escape but he was unwilling to fly unless she left with him. At last she agreed to go with him and they left at midnight."

"Before they had gone far, impelled by soft regret at leaving her home forever, the maiden asked her lover's permission to return an instant that she might bear away some memento. So retreating to her footsteps she broke a sprig from the glossy laved vine which climbed her father's cabin and preserving it at her breast in her flight through the wilderness she planted it at the door of her home in the land of the Seminoles."

"Here its milk white blossoms and golden centers, often recalled her childhood days in the far away mountains of Georgia and from that time to this the beautiful flower has been known throughout the southern states as 'The Cherokee Rose.'"

Hundreds of other interesting legends of like character have been handed down concerning this romantic part of the country. When the government opens the forest sections to the public the people will be able to visit the scenes where the action of most of the legends is laid.

CHAPTER VIII. On Swan River.

When Stonor's senses returned the first thing of which he was conscious was Clare's soft hand on his head. He opened his eyes and saw her face bending over him. Putting up his hand he found that his head was tightly bandaged. "What happened?" he whispered.

"She scarcely breathed her reply. The woman shot you. She was hidden in the bush."

Looking beyond her, Stonor saw Imbrie and the breed woman eating by the fire in high good humor. He observed that the woman was wearing the revolver he had given Clare. "She dismissed me before I could fire," Clare went on. "Your wound is not serious. The bullet only ploughed the scalp above your ear."

Imbrie looked over and saw them talking. "Let him alone," he said harshly. "Come over her and get your breakfast."

"Go," said Stonor with his eyes and lips.

She understood and went without demur. Imbrie motioned her to a place beside him and put a plate before her. She went through the motions of eating. Meanwhile the breed woman was bragging of her exploit. She spoke in English for the pleasure it gave her to triumph over the whites. "He gave Mary his canoe and made for the bush," she was saying.

"I know that," said Imbrie. "Go on."

"Well, as soon as Mary had bound up her leg she wanted to start. But her leg got worse on the way. When it came time to sleep, she had to untie me and let me cook, while she kept watch over me with the gun—my gun that Stonor gave her. It was at this place that we spelled. When we went on her leg kept getting worse, and soon she said we'd have to stop for the night. So I made camp. Then she ordered me to come up to her and get my hands tied; and patted the gun as a sort of hint. I went up to her all right, and when she put down the gun and took the rope, I snatched up the gun, and then I had her! Then I just took her knife and her food, and went, the woman said, callously:

"Damned inhuman!" Stonor cried involuntarily.

"What's the matter with you?" she returned. "I could have taken her canoe, too, and then she would properly have starved. But I left her the canoe and a piece of bread, too. Mary Moosa is fat enough. I guess she can live off her fat long enough to get to Myegee's village."

"What then?" asked Imbrie.

"I just walked off up the river. She couldn't track the canoe up the rapids. All she can do is to go on down."

"How did you know where I was?" asked Imbrie.

"I knew if the policeman got you he'd bring you down the river, and I figured I'd have another chance to get him. And if you got him I figured there wouldn't be any hurry and you'd wait for a while for me."

"You did well," said Imbrie, with condescending approval.

Imbrie dropped into the Indian tongue that they ordinarily used. From his knowledge of the Beaver language Stonor understood it pretty well, though a word escaped him here and there. The women were in favor of turning the two prisoners adrift in the wilderness without food or arms. Imbrie looked aside at Clare with a kind of hungry pain in his sullen eyes. "I won't leave her," he muttered.

The young woman flung up her hands in a passionate gesture. "Foolishness!" she cried.

A new idea seemed to occur to Imbrie; he said in English: "I'll take the redbreast for my servant. Upstream work is no cinch. I'll make him track us. It'll be a novelty to have a redbreast for a servant. Will you be my servant, redbreast?"

Stonor answered calmly: "If I have to be."

The breed woman, on the verge of an angry outburst, checked herself, and merely shrugged again. She said quietly in her own tongue: "He thinks he's going to escape."

"Sure he does!" answered Imbrie, "and I'm the man who will prevent him. I'll keep the weapons in my own hands. In the more sluggish reaches of the river, the men went aboard and paddled."

When they spelled in mid-morning Imbrie and the woman became involved in a discussion of which Stonor understood almost every word. The woman said impatiently: "How long are you going to keep up this foolishness?"

"What foolishness?" Imbrie said sullenly.

"Letting this man live. He's your enemy and mine. He's not going to forget that I shot at him twice. He's got some day, and he's got to get it now. He's much too willing to work."

"That's just women's talk. I know what I'm doing. I can always kill him. He's useful. We're getting downstream faster than we would without him."

"He's too willing to go up the river, I think."

"Oh, shut up. Go and pack the grub. We'll start soon."

The woman went to obey with her customary shrug.

That night, in camp, the breed woman renewed her arguments. So long as Stonor was alive, she insisted, both Imbrie and herself were in danger. After a while Imbrie said in the Indian tongue: "Well, you've got your way. You can kill him tomorrow."

"Why don't you kill him yourself?"

"You know very well why I don't want to do it," Imbrie went on. "It's nothing to you if the girl hates you."

"Oh, that's why, eh? You're scared she'd turn from bloody hands! She's made a fool of you, all right!"

"Never mind that. You do it tomorrow."

"Why not tonight?"

"I won't have it done in her sight. Tomorrow morning when we stop, you make some excuse to take him into the bush. There you shoot him or stick a knife in his back. I don't care so long as you make a job of it. You come back alone and make a story of how he tried to run away, see?"

It was a silent quartet that took to the river next day. About 10 o'clock they came to the mouth of a little creek coming in at the left, and here Imbrie indicated they would spell. As they went ashore Stonor perceived that the breed woman was somewhat agitated. She continually wiped her forehead on her sleeve. This was somehow more reassuring than her usual inhuman stolidity. The breed woman glanced inquiringly at Imbrie. He said in the Indian tongue: "We'll eat first."

None of them displayed much appetite. Stonor forced himself to eat. Imbrie glanced at him oddly from time to time. When they had finished the woman said in English with a very careless air: "I'm going to see if I can get some fresh meat."

She got her gun and departed. Stonor was aware likewise of the knife sticking out of the top of her moccasins. Both Imbrie and the woman had a self-conscious air. A child could have seen that something was afoot. The woman walked off through the grass and was presently lost among the trees. Pretty soon they heard a shot at no great distance. Presently they saw her returning. "I've got a moose," she said stolidly.

"Good work!" Imbrie cried. "Now we'll have something fit to eat."

She said: "I want help to bring in the meat."

Stonor, go help her," said Imbrie carelessly.

The trooper got up with an indifferent air. The woman forced him to walk in advance of her across the grass. When they reached the edge of the bush he stopped and looked at her. He saw that she was pale and perspiring freely. Half a dozen paces further on he stopped again. "Go on!" she said harshly.

"Got to tie my moccasin," he said, dropping on one knee and turning half round, so that he could keep an eye on her. She gave a swift glance over her shoulder. They were not yet fully out of sight of the others. "Your moccasins are not untied," she said suddenly.

"Very well, I will. When I see a good chance."

Above this sampling place the rapids succeeded each other with only a few hundred yards of smooth water between. Stonor worked with a right tent. Imbrie hid the knife and turned away. As he passed the breed woman Stonor heard him mutter: "I'll fix him tonight!"

That day as he trod the shore, bent under the tracking line, Stonor had plenty to occupy his mind. Over and over he made his calculations of time and distance: "This is the 27th. It was the 15th when I sent Toile Gampierre back to Enterprise. If he rode hard he'd get there about noon the 17th. The steamboat isn't due to start upstream until the 20th, but Gaviller would surely let her go at once when he got my message. Lambert, I know, would not lose an hour in setting out over the prairie. It must be less than a hundred miles from here to the spot where Lambert would hit this stream."

over he made his calculations of time and distance: "This is the 27th. It was the 15th when I sent Toile Gampierre back to Enterprise. If he rode hard he'd get there about noon the 17th. The steamboat isn't due to start upstream until the 20th, but Gaviller would surely let her go at once when he got my message. Lambert, I know, would not lose an hour in setting out over the prairie. It must be less than a hundred miles from here to the spot where Lambert would hit this stream."

At the end of the second day they found another soft sandy beach to camp on. Stonor was so weary he could scarcely remain awake long enough to eat. They all turned in immediately afterwards. Stonor was awakened by a soft touch on his cheek. Opening his eyes, he saw Clare's face not a foot from his own. "Martin, you looked so tired tonight it made me cry. I had to come and speak to you."

"Dangerous," he whispered. "These breeds sleep like cats."

"What's the difference? It's as bad as it can be already. Why do you work so hard for them?"

"I have hope of meeting help up the river."

"Are you glad I came, Martin?"

"Very glad. Go back to your tent."

Stonor was awakened the next time by a loud, jeering laugh. The breed woman was standing at his feet, pointing mockingly to the tell-tale print of Clare's body in the sand beside him. No sound escaped from Imbrie, but his smooth face turned hideous with rage. The woman, with a wicked smile, drew the knife out of her moccasin, and offered it to him. He eagerly snatched it up. But at that moment Clare came out of her

An amusement device has made its appearance in Japan which gives nearly all the thrills of flying but with the element of danger practically removed. It consists essentially of a tandem biplane carried on a float and propelled by an airplane motor. It has a seating capacity of about twenty persons and, instead of rising from the water, it slides over the surface at a fair speed. It is described in Popular Mechanics.

Ol' King Dan I Has Jolly Time Making Europe's Royal Matches

Dan Cupid's victims, according to latest reports. Upper left, Lady Mary Cambridge and Prince of Wales; upper right, King Alexander, Serbia, and Princess Marie, Rumania; below, Prince Leopold, Belgium, and Princess Yolanda, Italy; below Alexander, Lady Rachel Cavendish and Duke of York; Prince Frederick, Denmark, and Princess Olga, Greece; Princess Thyra, Denmark, who will wed a commoner.

Daniel I, king of the realm of Greece, is a despotic ruler of hearts, and is considered a very considerable merit just now and the royal eligibles of Europe, collectively, are cast in the shade of his jester.

His ultimatum on the royal matches for the year are expected any day, and in the meantime he appears to be having the time of his gay young days crossing the matrimonial guessers at when they figure they've solved the marriage tangle.

First the Prince of Wales was scheduled to marry Lady Rachel Cavendish. Gossip had it all arranged. Then his highness, Cupid, not the prince, let it be known that Lady Mary Cambridge was very much in the lead, while Rachel would have to finish in second place with the Duke of York in the British marital handi-cap.

The love affair of Prince Leopold of Belgium and Princess Yolanda of Italy, seems to be a cut and dried affair, but no one knows what Daniel is liable to do that will upset present plans.

Then again he seems perfectly satisfied with the Alexander-Marie romance and appears to have decided that it should end at the altar shortly.

Princess Olga of Greece has been linked up with several prospective husbands, including an American, young Leeds, but she'll wed Prince Frederick of Denmark, according to Cupid's latest calculations.

Princess Thyra, from a peek at Cupid's ledger, is destined to marry a commoner. His name? That's Cupid's secret, but he's a member of a guard regiment.

So all in all Dan is having a good time at the expense of European royalty.

WHAT'S WHAT By Helen Deale

A Pennsylvania correspondent, "T. C.," asks What's What to solve a little problem concerning the wording of wedding announcements when the mother of the bride is in an asylum for the insane. "To all intents and purposes," she is dead. Therefore, should not her name be left out of the announcement sent out by her husband?

Everything depends upon circumstances. The mother, though mentally ill, is living, and it would seem as though her name should appear, as it would if she were physically incapacitated. If people know of her misfortune, and no stigma is attached to it, her title "Mrs." should be attached to it; "Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Harrow announce," etc. But, in cases where either parent has been convicted of serious crime, and afterward adjudged mentally irresponsible, and sentenced to a penitentiary-asylum for the criminally insane, the other parent, in consideration for the daughter, and by way of relieving unpleasant reminiscences, is quite justified in omitting the name of the insane convict from the wedding announcements.

AUTO-SUGGESTION.

We were talking last week about the miracle man of Nancy whose fame has spread all over Europe. It is really a shame to call him a miracle man because he is so anxious that no one should consider what he has done in any way miraculous. Other physicians have done as much, he says. Yet these are some of the things that have happened at his clinics. A young woman came to him who had been blind in one eye from the time she was a small child. She was examined. There was nothing wrong with the eye, physically.

Come told her she could see, made her believe she could see, put his hand over the good eye and she saw perfectly with the one supposedly incapable of vision. She had believed that she could not see for so many years that there was no message from the eye to the brain. It was much like a broken telephone connection in which the doctor had reconstructed the broken wires.

Stories like this are common. Everyone knows how the cripples have gone to the cathedral at Lourdes and have healed, and how the sick have gone there and have been made well. There are processions and a great deal of emotional excitement at first, and the people are worked up and believe that certain things will happen to them, and in many cases

Dorothy: If your cheeks are hollow, you must be in need of good building up. Massage the face with a good cream and drink plenty of milk, which will increase your weight and build up your system.

Interested Reader: When the eyebrows meet over the nose and spoil the expression of the face, it is advisable to pull out these hairs until you give enough space between the brows.

Discouraged: Since you state that you do not abuse the digestive organs and have had a muddy skin, full of pimples for years, you should consult a good doctor and get at the cause for such condition. You cannot clear this up by merely working on the surface, although a daily hot bath will be a great help in freeing the pores, and will relieve the face of stain caused by a hot dish on mahogany and hold a warm iron near enough to have a heating effect, but not close enough to burn. Repeat and polish with oil.

Spotless Pantry Shelves. The cleanest and most attractive covering for your pantry shelf is plain white olecloth. The shelves may be wiped off each week and there is so little wear and tear in places of this sort that the olecloth will last indefinitely.

Magazines of the Household. Make it a rule in your house that if a person's initials are on the outside cover of a magazine, the book is to be kept for him or her, and not thrown out. So often we read things we should like to clip, but do not want to spoil the magazine for the others in the house, and this would insure its being saved.

Twelve Entries Get Under Way In Great National Balloon Race

Captain Roy Donaldson Is Forced Down After Traveling Four Miles. Cities Report.

Milwaukee, May 31.—(By the Associated Press.)—Twelve gigantic balloons tonight were sailing through the upper air as participants in the thirteenth national balloon race, which started here today and ends for each navigator whenever and wherever he returns to earth.

Thirteen pilots took balloons into the air, but the sky pilgrimage for one, Roy Donaldson, of Springfield, Illinois, ended quickly. His bag was unable to hold its gas and when Donaldson saw himself headed into Lake Michigan and sinking at the same time, he came down at Bay View, after a four-mile journey. The landing was made within a few hundred feet of the lake.

Of the twelve pilots, only eleven are contestants, as one of the naval bags, filled with helium and carrying a recently invented radio device being tested secretly, is flying as a non-contestant. The helium has a greater lifting power than the gas used by the other balloons.

The balloons were started by a gusty wind which carried them rapidly south by east. Special weather reports showed, however, that when an altitude of 3,000 to 5,000 feet was reached the big bags would be shifted into a northeasterly direction by a steady southwest wind. The pilots said they planned to take advantage of this air current, which would carry them into northeastern United States or southeastern Canada, provided they negotiated the great lakes.

Straight Into Clouds.
Virtually nothing was known here of five of the bags after they left, for they shot almost straight up into the clouds and disappeared. It was with a feeling of awe that the 20,000 persons who, barred from the park for fear of accidents, gathered on the housetops and streets, saw the bags suddenly become invisible. These were the army bags piloted by Major Oscar Westover, of Washington; Lieutenant James T. Neely, of Roswell, Cal.; the helium filled naval bag commanded by Lieutenant Commander J. P. Norfleet, of Lakehurst, N. J., and the civilian entries of Ralph Upson, of Detroit, and Barnard von Hoffman, of St. Louis.

The other flyers were visible for some time as they navigated their southeasterly course, most of them maintaining an altitude of about 1,500 feet. Reports brought back to Milwaukee by airplanes which accompanied them on the first stages of the flight, said that some of those bags seemed to be switching somewhat into an almost due southerly path.

Soualls which blew up at the start of the race made the get-aways extremely difficult. Indications were that most of the bags would be in clear territory before morning.

Chicago, May 31.—A large balloon, believed to be one of those which started from Milwaukee in the air race today, was observed over Lincoln park here shortly before 9 p. m. The bag was flying low and appeared to just clear the roof of a 15-story hotel building as it lazily drifted toward the business district. Reports also were received of two other bags, one over Hinsdale, a western suburb, and the other over Pana, Ill.

Muskegon, Mich., May 31.—A balloon traveling rapidly at a high altitude in a southeasterly direction, passed over Muskegon at 7:30 tonight. No mark of identification could be ascertained.

CENTRAL OF GEORGIA RAILWAY CALLS ATTENTION TO THE CAREFUL CROSSING CAMPAIGN

The safety section of the American Railway Association has announced its "Careful Crossing Campaign" to be in progress from June 1 to September 30. In the past, these four months have been the worst third of the year for motor vehicle grade-crossing accidents. In preparation for the campaign, the country has been covered with posters and stickers bearing a picture of a grade-crossing scene, showing a locomotive in the act of striking an automobile occupied by men, women and children. Above the picture are these words in large letters: "Cross Crossings Cautiously."

The public will understand the seriousness of this problem when it is explained that the number of motor vehicles registered in the United States increased from 1,033,096 in 1912 to 10,449,785 in 1921. There is now one motor vehicle for every ten persons in the United States.

Some believe that it is the duty of the railroads to protect motor vehicle users from their own carelessness by separating the grades at crossings. There are 252,000 railway grade crossings in the United States. It has been estimated that it would cost $12,600,000,000 to eliminate them, or two-thirds of the total value of the railroads as established by the Interstate Commerce Commission for rate-making purposes. It will be seen, therefore, that grade-crossing elimination is out of the question, at least for a long time to come. If the drivers of motor vehicles can be educated to "Stop, Look and Listen" at crossings, this will give the same result as the expenditure of $12,600,000,000, so far as safety is concerned.

The railroads have made splendid progress in reducing the number of accidents resulting in injury to their passengers and employees. However, motor vehicle grade-crossing accidents have been steadily increasing for years. These accidents are caused almost entirely by the negligence of motor vehicle drivers, and for that reason the efforts of the railroads to reduce them have been unavailing.

During 1920 there were 3,012 automobiles struck on grade crossings. In these accidents there were 1,273 persons killed and 3,977 persons injured. If the drivers of the motor vehicles involved in these accidents had "Stopped, Looked and Listened" at the crossings, not one of the accidents would have occurred.

A motor vehicle in the hands of a careful driver is an agency for safety. It can be driven up close to the railway track and stopped in perfect safety—differing from horse-drawn vehicles in that respect.

The Central of Georgia Railway heartily approves the "Careful Crossing Campaign" of the safety section of the American Railway Association. We appeal to our patrons and friends and our employees to co-operate in every way possible to make the campaign successful.

We want the public to know us and what we stand for. Our motto is "Service." By co-operation with our patrons we have found many ways in which we can render them exceptional service, and our patrons, in turn, have served us well.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

W. A. WINBURN,
President, Central of Georgia Railway Company.

M'WEENY BALKS ON TRANSFER TO MINORS

Chicago, May 31.—Douglas McWeeny, one of the Chicago American pitchers, named to figure in the $100,000 deal with San Francisco for infielder Willie Kamm, has balked on going to the coast league. He signed a two-year contract yesterday with the Chicago team of the Mid-West semi-pro association, calling for more money than he was receiving from the Sox. McWeeny donned the uniform of the new club and practiced with it yesterday. Dick Kerr, former Sox pitcher, is a team mate, as is Long Tom Hughes, also a former major league star.

MISS STIRLING COMING HOME

New York, May 31.—Homesick for a glimpse of her old haunts and friends in Atlanta, Miss Alexa Stirling, who won the women's metropolitan golf championship here last week, has decided to absent herself from the women's eastern championship tournament here next week and take a trip south, instead.

Miss Stirling spent the winter selling bonds in New York and has established her residence here.

Miss Glenna Collett, one of the strongest players in last year's women's national tournament, will be in the eastern championship.

ROOKIE AVENGES SELF AGAINST THE GIANTS

The rookie's revenge was the title of a baseball piece enacted in Philadelphia Wednesday when the Giants lost again to the Phillies, the Phillies' third victory over the champions in four games. The score was 3 to 2.

Walter Henline, the young catcher whom the Giants sent to the baseball limbo last year, whacked out a homer early in the game and started a batting rally in the eighth, which scored two more for the Phillies.

Pensions are being paid to 1,750,000 war cripples by the British empire.

KILBANE HIT BY HARD TIMES

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
New York, May 31.—Johnny Kilbane has hunted this town from the Battery, where the chips go out, to Harlem, where the chips cash in, and he's off to Philadelphia in the morning with nothing in his bag but the shaving kit and the alternate shirt. He did want to sign a few modern contracts for a few nice fights at $100,000 a fight, but the featherweight champion of all this fine old world to live in discovered that all the promoters had suddenly taken up roadwork for their health and were forcing it through flowered daisies and bosky dell for Boston, Bar Harbor, Bath, Barnegat and Baltimore.

Business with the featherweight champion is simply terrible at $100,000 a fight and he begins to believe the reports in the financial reviews concerning depression, hard times and the remoteness of normalcy.

Kilbane came back from Europe with his jack-locker full of an aching void and when he got home to Cleveland he took himself into executive sessions on the matter of finance.

The cleaning he had gone through in the hands of the London hotel clerks and unformed nunnishness of the old world metropolis Kilbane decided he would just have to fight.

Johnny Hitts the Trail.

Fortwith Johnny seized hold of his carpet-bag, cranked up the flivver and guided the royal champion-ship coach in the direction of New York. The flivver, however, must be in the hands of the promoter hasn't been "in" for any of Kilbane's subsequent social calls and the hired help around the Garden have been about as cordial as the Italian would be to Lord Carson, the Ulsterman, except, of course, they haven't punched him in the eye.

"A damn good way from this place," Mr. Kilbane announced Wednesday. "I'm willing to fight any featherweight in the world, if terms are offered, but I don't hear the offers. Who are these taxi drivers around New York, anyway, that I should be afraid of them? Who's Andy Chaney or Peppie Martin? Didn't Jack Sharkey, a hantam-weight, give Martin the whaling of his life—this Martin that they've been calling a second Terry McGovern?"

Price Not Very High.

"My price isn't so high, when you consider that Benny Leonard gets $100,000 for some of his fights and Dempsey wants half a million. I got $85,000 in my own home town of Cleveland for beating Frush and surely New York doesn't want to say that Cleveland is a better sporting town. Oh, for New York! for shame and so forth."

"Just put it this way: I'm sort of tough and I'll fight anybody in the world at from 122 to 125 pounds and 2 p. m., and my price is from $100,000 up. Goodness me, a body might think I was one of those mercenary champions from the way the promoters haul in the front steps when I drive up."

Whereat the featherweight champion claimed his professional rebate from the room clerk and steered the flivver toward Philly, where he is to be a second for Bobby Barrett, in the southpaw soiree featuring Bobby Barrett and Leftie Lewis Tendler Thursday night.

"PUTTING THE NEXT ONE OVER." WITH BUSBY

BAD NEWS FROM Paris. Nope, France isn't paying us for more war debts. Worse than that.

FRENCH AREN'T going to stake us to another twin Statue of Liberty. One's enough. But it's worse than that.

FRANCE HAS BEEN our sister republic so long that their male citizens are starting to act like sisters.

BOYS PULLED THEIR 1922 fashions about over their heads with rough male mannequins and Boy Scout models. Styles this season will be corsets for stevedores. Crepe de chine B.V. D. for nannies. Red velvet trousers for steeplejacks. Lip sticks and powder puffs for burglars and vanity cases for street cleaners.

WASP WAISTS for municipal employees and form-fitting clothes for plumbers. Pretty soon you will hear of man being thrown out of his lodge for smoking cigars.

NO DOUBT THAT we are getting more effeminate every day. In about 10 years, only individuals like U. S. who looks like man will be bearded lady in Barnum's.

WE DON'T WANT to know what our men are coming to.

WHAT WE WANT to know is where they have gone.

MAYBE IT'S LAWS that are doing it. Limit lion's diet to birdseed and eventually he will trill like canary. Force man to live on the cream and ginger ale and he will start to talk sweet and low.

WHERE IS old-fashioned man who wore his trousers inside his boots and sang bass at Odd Fellows' hall?

HE'S GONE FOR haunts of civilization like bison and passenger pigeon. His place is filled by his son, who smokes cigarettes, dances and wears cloth top shoes.

BOYS, WE'RE GETTING weaker and weaker.

WON'T BE LONG before we spend our afternoons on porches knitting and telling secrets.

AND WHEN WE take our girls for promenades, they will walk on gutter side.

$2,300 IS REALIZED
BY SALE OF POPPIES

More than $2,300 was realized Tuesday from the sale of poppies on Atlanta's streets. It was announced Wednesday. The funds are in custody of A. M. Bergstrom, of the Citizens and Southern bank.

The money is to be disbursed by a committee of Atlantans for the care of disabled war veterans. The poppies were sold under the auspices of Atlanta Post No. 390, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

HAILS DIAMOND DECISION AS VICTORY

New York, May 31.—The supreme court's decision in holding that the Sherman anti-trust law does not apply to organized baseball was hailed as "a great stimulus to the future development of baseball" in a statement made public today by President John A. Heydler, of the National League.

"After years of litigation, we finally have the clear cut ruling that baseball is a sport and not a trade," Mr. Heydler said, adding that it was a tribute to the foresight and wisdom of the men who laid the foundations of the sport.

SNOB 11 WINS MILE STAKE

New York, May 31.—Snoob II, the colt for which J. S. Costen paid $85,000 last week, achieved greatness Wednesday by defeating the preakness winner, Pillory, in the famous Withers mile stake at Belmont park in 1:25.45, the same time that Man o'War made, and within one-fifth of a second of the American mile record held by Audacious.

The race paid $17,050 to the winner.

Clarence Kummer ran Snoob II behind June Grass for six furlongs of the race, a three-horse event, then moved smoothly to the front and came home in a gallop. Pillory was vigorously whipped but was unable to overtake Snoob II. Pillory finished second, four lengths away and June Grass was four lengths behind pillory.

Snoob II and Hea, which was second in the preakness, will be among the entrants in the $50,000 Belmont on June 10.

FUDGED ON HER AGE,
SO LUCK FAILED HER

Paris, June.—Just a little story from Monte Carlo.

Lady of—er, matronly age wants to take a whirl at roulette. Being very green at the game, she asks her husband what number to pick.

"Play it on your age, that's always lucky," he replies.

Lady hesitates, then finally plunks her all on the 22. And the 35 is the winner!

"Good enough for you," laughs the unfeeling male brute. And now the lady is talking of divorce.

Lewis Keeps Title.

Muskogee, Okla., May 31.—Ed "Strangler" Lewis retained his wrestling championship title here tonight by throwing John Grandovich in straight falls. Both were the result of the application of the headlock, the first coming in 41 minutes and the second in one minute.

THE SPORTSMAN BY WALTER CAMP.

WHEN PLAW CAME on from the Pacific coast and showed the "ef-fete easterners" how to throw the hammer years ago, he began that conquest which has now become so impressive as to convince even the most big-boned that the east is falling behind in track and field sports.

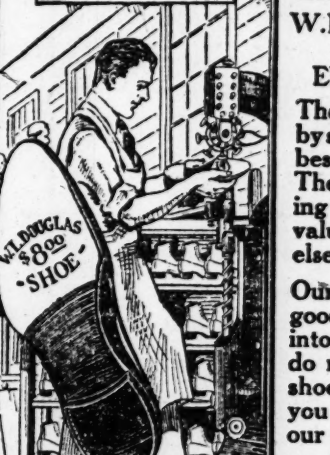

VARIOUS REASONS have been and would be given for the victory of California's handful of men in the intercollegiate. It is doubtful if mere explanations will satisfy the man on the fence.

HOLDERNESS, who won the British amateur golf title at Prestwick, is 36 years old, and one of the best exemplars of good form. He is a long driver who plays his shots well when in the mood.

New York, May 31.—An early advance was followed by reactions in the cotton market today owing to realizing of liquidation for over the approaching government report and a better cotton belt forecast than

The market opened steady at an advance of 7 to 27 points in response to higher Liverpool cables, bullish Manchester trade advices and reports of unsettled weather with light rains or showers in the south over the holiday. There was a relatively good demand for July, which sold up to demand of July which sold up to 21.17 and December advanced to 20.45 on the call but there was a good deal of realizing at these figures and the market worked gradually lower during the balance of the day reaching the lowest prices at

July was relatively firm during the greater part of the day on covering by the trade or the transfer of hedges to later deliveries, but after selling about 50 to 53 points over October lost 10 or 12 points of the premium in the last few minutes.

Another private crop report was issued making the condition 69, but was without any apparent effect on the market.

Offerings became a little more active after the publication of the western belt prospects for clear weather in Oklahoma and east Texas, although the outlook was for more or less unsettled conditions elsewhere in the south. Private cables said the advance in Liverpool was due to the increased spot demand and a more active business in Manchester, but Liverpool was a moderate seller in the local market.

NEW YORK SPOTS

New York, May 31.—Cotton spot quiet; middling, 21.20.

SELLING HEAVY IN NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, May 31.—Liquidation of the long interest was the dominating influence in the cotton market today, and it had prices de-market today and it had prices depressed almost from the opening. Pressure to sell was heaviest in the late trading and the close was at practically the lowest prices of the day, at net losses of 27 to 47 points. July sold off to 20.50 and closed at that price. December sold off to 19.50 and closed at that price, showing a net loss of the session of

Rainy weather in the belt and a favorable Liverpool, together with private reports of more business being done in the Manchester market caused enough buying in the early morning to bring the market 7 to 12 trading to put the market 4 to 13 points up, July reaching 20.90. Realizing by longs was felt at this advance and it soon became heavy enough to cause a gradual sag which lasted during the remainder of the session, except for one or two short periods of rallying, which, however, did not cause any pronounced up

For a while, in the morning session, the market was steadied by the forecast of showery weather for the eastern half of the belt and by the large export movement for the day, total clearances from all ports amounting to 50,439 bales, but selling out by longs was the main influence
